Skin Cancer in Australia: Our National Cancer – Report on the Inquiry into Skin Cancer in Australia, House of Representatives Standing Committee on Health

The Australasian College of Dermatologists, Australia’s peak body for education and training in skin health, welcomes the Report of the Parliamentary Inquiry into Skin Cancer released on Tuesday March 24th 2015.

The College Fellows are leaders in skin cancer prevention, education, detection and treatment and are keen to keep the interest of the public front and centre in the battle against skin cancer. The College is committed to working with RACGP and ACCRM to achieve this.

College continues to support additional resources being deployed across the spectrum of medical education & training from undergraduate training, upskilling of GPs through bona fide upskilling programs, increasing resources to expand specialist numbers and allied specialist training programs. This also includes resources to enable research and education into new technologies to improve patient care.
